

ARTnews

ARTnews in Brief: Miles McEnergy Now Represents Rico Gatson—and More

By Claire Selvin, Tessa Solomon

Rico Gatson, Untitled (Transparent Bodies), 2020, acrylic paint on wood.
COURTESY THE ARTIST AND MILES MCENERY GALLERY

Friday, July 31

Miles McEnergy Now Represents Rico Gatson

Mixed media artist Rico Gatson has joined the New York–based Miles McEnergy Gallery, where he will have a solo exhibition opening November 19. Gatson’s practice spans painting, sculpture, video, and installation, and his work often examines events from Black history. His work is part of the permanent collections at the Studio Museum in Harlem, the Smithsonian American Art Museum in Washington, D.C., the Denver Art Museum in Colorado, and other institutions.