

HYPERALLERGIC

Five New York City Shows to See This Week

From Norman Bluhm's reinvented abstraction to the history of Barbie at the Museum of Arts and Design, we're looking at a diverse array of art this week.

10 March 2025 | By Natalie Haddad, Hrag Vartanian, Lisa Yin Zhang, John Yau and Carol Ockman

Bulgaroctonus, 1967, Oil on canvas

From reinventing abstraction to recreating Barbie for new generations, we're looking at a wide range of art this week. Make sure to catch Norman Bluhm's unorthodox abstracts and the Museum of Arts and Design's dizzying display of Barbie's history before they end this weekend. After that, revisit art history's past with a survey of Christo and Jeanne-Claude's legendary project "The Gates" and Deborah Kass's feminist pastiches. Manuel Herreros de Lemos and Mateo Manaure Arilla's poignant 1982 documentary "Trans" and its accompany exhibition at the Institute for Studies on Latin American Art rounds out our list.

- Natalie Haddad, Reviews Editor