

HANS HOFMANN (b. 1880, Weissenburg, Bavaria, Germany) began his arts education in Munich, later moving to Paris in 1904. During his time in Paris, Hofmann frequented the Café du Dome where he met the many artists, dealers, and intellectuals who gathered there. In 1914, Hofmann returned to Germany and, in 1915, opened his own art school in Munich, the Schule für Bildene Kunst. In 1930, Hofmann traveled to the United States to teach a summer session at the University of California, Berkeley. After returning to Munich for the winter, Hofmann returned to California to teach at the Chouinard School of Art in Los Angeles, and again at Berkeley, until 1932. Due to the growing hostility towards intellectuals in Germany, Hofmann made the decision to stay in America and relocate to New York in 1932. While in New York, he assumed a teaching position at The Arts Students League before opening the eponymous Hans Hofmann School of Fine Arts in 1933. In 1935, Hofmann's School additionally began to hold summer classes in Provincetown, Massachusetts. Hofmann became well known not only as an important artist of the time but also as an admired teacher—Helen Frankenthaler, Allan Kaprow, Lee Krasner, Louise Nevelson, Joan Mitchell, and Wolf Kahn were amongst his students. 1944 was a significant year for Hofmann as he was featured in four group exhibitions and notably had his first solo exhibition in New York at Peggy Guggenheim's renowned Art of This Century Gallery.

During his lifetime, Hofmann's work was exhibited at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco, CA (1931); the Isaac Delgado Museum of Art, New Orleans, LA (1941); The Art of This Century Gallery, New York, NY (1944); The Arts Club of Chicago, Chicago, IL (1944); Milwaukee Art Institute, Milwaukee, WI (1944); 67 Gallery, New York, NY (1944); Mortimer Grant Gallery, New York, NY (1944); The Whitney Museum of American Art, New York, NY (1945); Betty Parsons Gallery, New York, NY (1947); Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, Dallas, TX (1947); Kootz Gallery, New York, NY (1947); Addison Gallery of American Art, Andover, MA (1948); Galerie Maeght, Paris, France (1949); Gallery 200, Provincetown, MA (1949); Studio 35, New York, NY (1950); Baltimore Museum of Art, Baltimore, MD (1954); Bennington College, Bennington, VT (1955); Art Alliance, Philadelphia, PA (1956); Venice Biennale, XXIV Esposizione Biennale Internazionale d'Arte Venezia, Venice, Italy (1960); Fränkische Galerie am Marientor, Nuremberg, Germany (1962); The Museum of Modern Art, New York, NY (1963).

His work is included in select collections including the Art Institute of Chicago, Chicago, IL; Aspen Art Museum, Aspen, CO; Auckland Art Gallery, Auckland, New Zealand; Baltimore Museum of Art, Baltimore, MD; Berkeley Art Museum, Berkeley, CA; Blanton Museum of Art, Austin, TX; Centre Georges Pompidou, Paris, France; Cincinnati Art Museum, Cincinnati, OH; Cleveland Museum of Art, Cleveland, OH; Fundación Juan March, Madrid, Spain; Germanisches Nationalmuseum, Nuremberg, Germany; Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Washington, D.C.; Hood Museum of Art, Hanover, NH; Kunsthaus Hamburg, Germany; Los Angeles County Museum of Art, Los Angeles, CA; The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, NY; Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, Montreal, Canada; Musée de Grenoble, Grenoble, France; Museum Ludwig, Cologne, Germany; Museum of Contemporary Art, Chicago, IL; Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles, CA; Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, MA; Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, TX; The Museum of Modern Art, New York, NY; National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C.; National Gallery of Australia, Canberra, Australia; Philadelphia Museum of Art, Philadelphia, PA; San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, San Francisco, CA; Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum, New York, NY; Städtische Galerie im Lenbachhaus, Munich, Germany; Tate Collection, London, United Kingdom; Walker Art Center, Minneapolis, MN; Whitney Museum of American Art, New York, NY and the Yale University Art Gallery, New Haven, CT.

Hofmann died at age 85 on 17 February, 1966 in New York, NY.

CHRONOLOGY

1880

Hans Hofmann is born in Weissenburg in Bavaria, Germany, on 21 March. His father Theodor Hofmann, a government official, and his mother Franciska, the daughter of a prominent brewer and wine producer, have three sons and two daughters. Hans is the second son.

1886

The family moves to Munich. Hofmann attends public schools and develops special interests in mathematics, science and music. He plays the violin, piano and organ, and begins to draw.

1896

With his father's help, he finds a position as assistant to the director of public works of the state of Bavaria. He patents several scientific inventions.

1898

Hofmann studies painting with Willi Schwarz, who introduces him to Impressionism, at Moritz Heymann's art school in Munich.

1900

Hofmann meets Maria "Miz" Wolfegg, his future wife.

1903

Through Willi Schwarz, Hofmann meets Phillip Freudenberg, the nephew of a Berlin collector, who becomes his patron from 1904 to 1914 and enables him to live in Paris (though he often spends his summers in Germany).

1904

Hofmann frequents Café du Dome, a haunt of artists and writers, with Jules Pascin, a friend from Moritz Heymann's school. Miz joins him in Paris. Hofmann attends evening sketch classes at the École Colarossi, where he meets Picasso, Braque and Matisse.

1908

Hofmann exhibits with the Neue Sezession in Berlin, and again in 1909.

1910

Hofmann's first solo exhibition is held at Paul Cassirer Gallery, Berlin. He meets and befriends Robert Delaunay, who co-founded the Orphism art movement, known for its use of color and geometric shapes.

1914

Hofmann and Miz leave Paris for Corsica, where Hofmann recuperates from tuberculosis. An illness of Hofmann's sister leads them to return to Germany. The outbreak of World War I forces them to remain there. Financial assistance from Phillip Freudenberg ends.

1915

Ineligible for the army due to the aftereffects of his lung condition, Hofmann opens the Schule für Bildene Kunst in Munich.

1918

After the war, Hofmann's school becomes known abroad. Between 1922 and 1929, he holds summer sessions in Bavaria, Yugoslavia, Italy, and France. He makes frequent trips to Paris. He has little time to paint, but draws continually.

1924

Hofmann marries Miz Wolfegg.

1930

At the invitation of former student Worth Ryder, Hofmann teaches a summer session at the University of California, Berkeley, where Ryder is an Associate Professor in the Department of Art. Hofmann returns to Munich for the winter.

1931

In the spring, he teaches at the Chouinard School of Art, Los Angeles, and again at Berkeley in the summer. He exhibits drawings at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco—his first solo exhibition in the United States.

1932

He returns to the Chouinard School of Art in the summer. Advised by Miz not to return to Munich because of growing political hostility toward intellectuals in Germany, Hofmann settles in New York. Former student Vaclav Vytlačil helps arrange a teaching position at The Art Students League of New York.

1933

Hofmann spends the summer as a guest instructor at the Thurn School of Art in Gloucester, Massachusetts. In the fall, he opens a school in New York at 444 Madison Avenue and begins to paint again.

1934

Hofmann travels to Bermuda, where he stays for several months before returning to the United States with a permanent visa. He teaches again at the Thurn School of Art and opens the Hans Hofmann School of Fine Arts at 137 East 57th Street in New York.

1935

Hofmann opens a summer school in Provincetown, Massachusetts.

1936

Hofmann moves his school to 52 West 9th Street in New York.

1938

The Hofmann School moves again, to 52 West 8th Street, its permanent home in New York until 1958. Hofmann's lecture series at the school in the winter of 1938-39 is attended by such figures as Arshile Gorky and Clement Greenberg.

1939

Miz Hofmann arrives in America and joins her husband. From that year on, they spend five months each summer in Provincetown and the rest of the year in New York.

1941

Hofmann becomes an American citizen. He delivers an address at the annual meeting of American Abstract Artists at the Riverside Museum and has a solo exhibition at the Isaac Delgado Museum of Art, New Orleans.

1942

Lee Krasner, formerly a Hofmann student, introduces him to Jackson Pollock.

1944

Hofmann has his first exhibition in New York at Peggy Guggenheim's The Art of This Century Gallery. Hans Hofmann, Paintings 1941-1944 opens at The Arts Club of Chicago and travels to the Milwaukee Art Institute. Hofmann's paintings are included in Forty American Moderns at 67 Gallery and Abstract and Surrealist Art in America at the Mortimer Brandt Gallery (arranged by Sidney Janis in conjunction with the publication of Janis' book of the same title) in New York. Hofmann meets the critic Clement Greenberg, and his close friendship with the author and critic Harold Rosenberg begins.

1945

Hofmann is included in Contemporary American Painting at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York. He is included in all subsequent Whitney painting annuals during his lifetime.

1947

Hofmann exhibits at the Betty Parsons Gallery in New York and the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts. He begins to exhibit with the Kootz Gallery, New York, which would hold a solo show of Hofmann's work each year (except 1948 and 1956) until the artist's death.

1948 There is a retrospective exhibition of Hofmann's work at the Addison Gallery of American Art in Andover, MA in conjunction with the publication of his book The Search for the Real and Other Essays.

1949

Hofmann travels to Paris to attend the opening of his exhibition at the Galerie Maeght and visits the studios of Picasso, Braque, Brancusi and Miró. He helps Fritz Bultman and Weldon Kees organize Forum 49, a summer series of lectures and exhibitions at Gallery 200 in Provincetown.

1950

Hofmann participates in a symposium at Studio 35 with William Baziotis, James Brooks, Willem de Kooning, Herbert Ferber, Theodoros Stamos, David Smith and Bradley Walker Tomlin. He joins the "Irascibles," a group of Abstract Expressionist artists in an open letter protesting the exclusion of the avant-garde from an upcoming exhibition of American Art at The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

1951

Hofmann juries the 60th Annual American Exhibition at the Art Institute of Chicago with Aline Louchheim and Peter Blume.

1954

Hofmann has a solo exhibition at the Baltimore Museum of Art.

1955

Clement Greenberg organizes a small retrospective of Hofmann's paintings at Bennington College in Vermont.

1956

Hofmann designs mosaic murals for the lobby of the William Kaufmann Building, 711 Third Avenue, New York. A retrospective is held at the Art Alliance in Philadelphia.

1957

A retrospective exhibition is held at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York. It travels to Des Moines, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Minneapolis, Utica and Baltimore.

1958

Hofmann ceases teaching to devote himself to painting. He moves his studios into his former New York and Provincetown schools. He completes a mosaic mural for the New York School of Printing at 439 West 49th Street.

1960

Hofmann represents the United States, along with Philip Guston, Franz Kline, and Theodore Roszac, at the Venice Biennale.

1962

A retrospective exhibition opens at the Fränkische Galerie am Marienort, Nuremberg, Germany, and travels to Cologne, Berlin and Munich. The exhibition Oils on Paper 1961-1962 opens in Munich. Hofmann is awarded honorary membership in the Akademie der Bildende Kunst in Nuremberg and an honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree by Dartmouth College.

1963

Miz Hofmann dies. A retrospective exhibition, Hans Hofmann and His Students, organized by William Seitz under the auspices of The Museum of Modern Art, travels throughout the United States, South America, and Europe. Hofmann signs an agreement to donate forty-five paintings to the University of California, Berkeley, to fund the construction of a gallery in his honor.

1964

Hofmann receives an honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree from the University of California, Berkeley, and the Solomon R. Guggenheim International Award. He becomes a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, New York. Renate Schmitz inspires "The Renate Series."

1965

Hofmann is awarded an honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree by Pratt Institute, New York. He marries Renate Schmitz and completes "The Renate Series."

1966

Hofmann's final exhibition at the Kootz Gallery, New York, opens on 1 February. He dies on 17 February in New York. His exhibition at Kootz closes 26 February.
