

ALEXANDER ROSS

19 FEBRUARY – 28 MARCH 2026
525 WEST 22ND STREET

NEW YORK – MILES McENERY GALLERY is delighted to announce an exhibition of new paintings by Alexander Ross, on view 19 February through 28 March 2026 at 525 West 22nd Street. The exhibition is accompanied by a fully illustrated publication featuring an essay by Liam Otero.

This new body of work furthers Ross' long-standing exploration of perceptual ambiguity and organic form, extending a distinctive visual language shaped by biological systems, material transformation, and the porous boundary between abstraction and representation.

Each work begins as a small clay model, which Ross photographs and digitally alters before translating the image into oil on canvas. Each form emerges gradually, composed of discrete bands of color articulated through interlocking brushstrokes. As these elements converge across the surface, they build the image and give the forms an underlying structure and rhythmic coherence.

Color and surface remain central to this work. Vivid yet tempered hues lend the compositions a tactile intensity, while shifts in depth subtly destabilize the picture plane. The backgrounds play an equally active role. Rendered as a matrix suggestive of molecular chains or fluctuating energy fields, they operate as a containing force, suspending each form in an isolated, hovering state and heightening the sense of spatial ambiguity.

Ross evokes biological references without settling into literal representation, collapsing distinctions between the natural and the invented. As Liam Otero observes, "There is a hyperreal quality to Ross's compositions... Yet, the dynamism of Ross's painterly buildup of these biomorphic shapes... causes the subjects to actively transform before our eyes into something altogether beyond nature or... scientific explanation." Ross' newest paintings leave viewers suspended between recognition and imagination, inviting a close, immersive encounter with fluid, ever-shifting forms.
